

for a living planet®

LIVING PLANET REPORT 2008

A photograph of Earth from space, showing clouds and continents against the black void of space. This image serves as the background for the title text.

WWF/IUCN/Keidanren Japan Symposium for the Business Sector Tokyo, 26 March 2010

Jonathan Loh
WWF International

Orangutan Habitat, Borneo

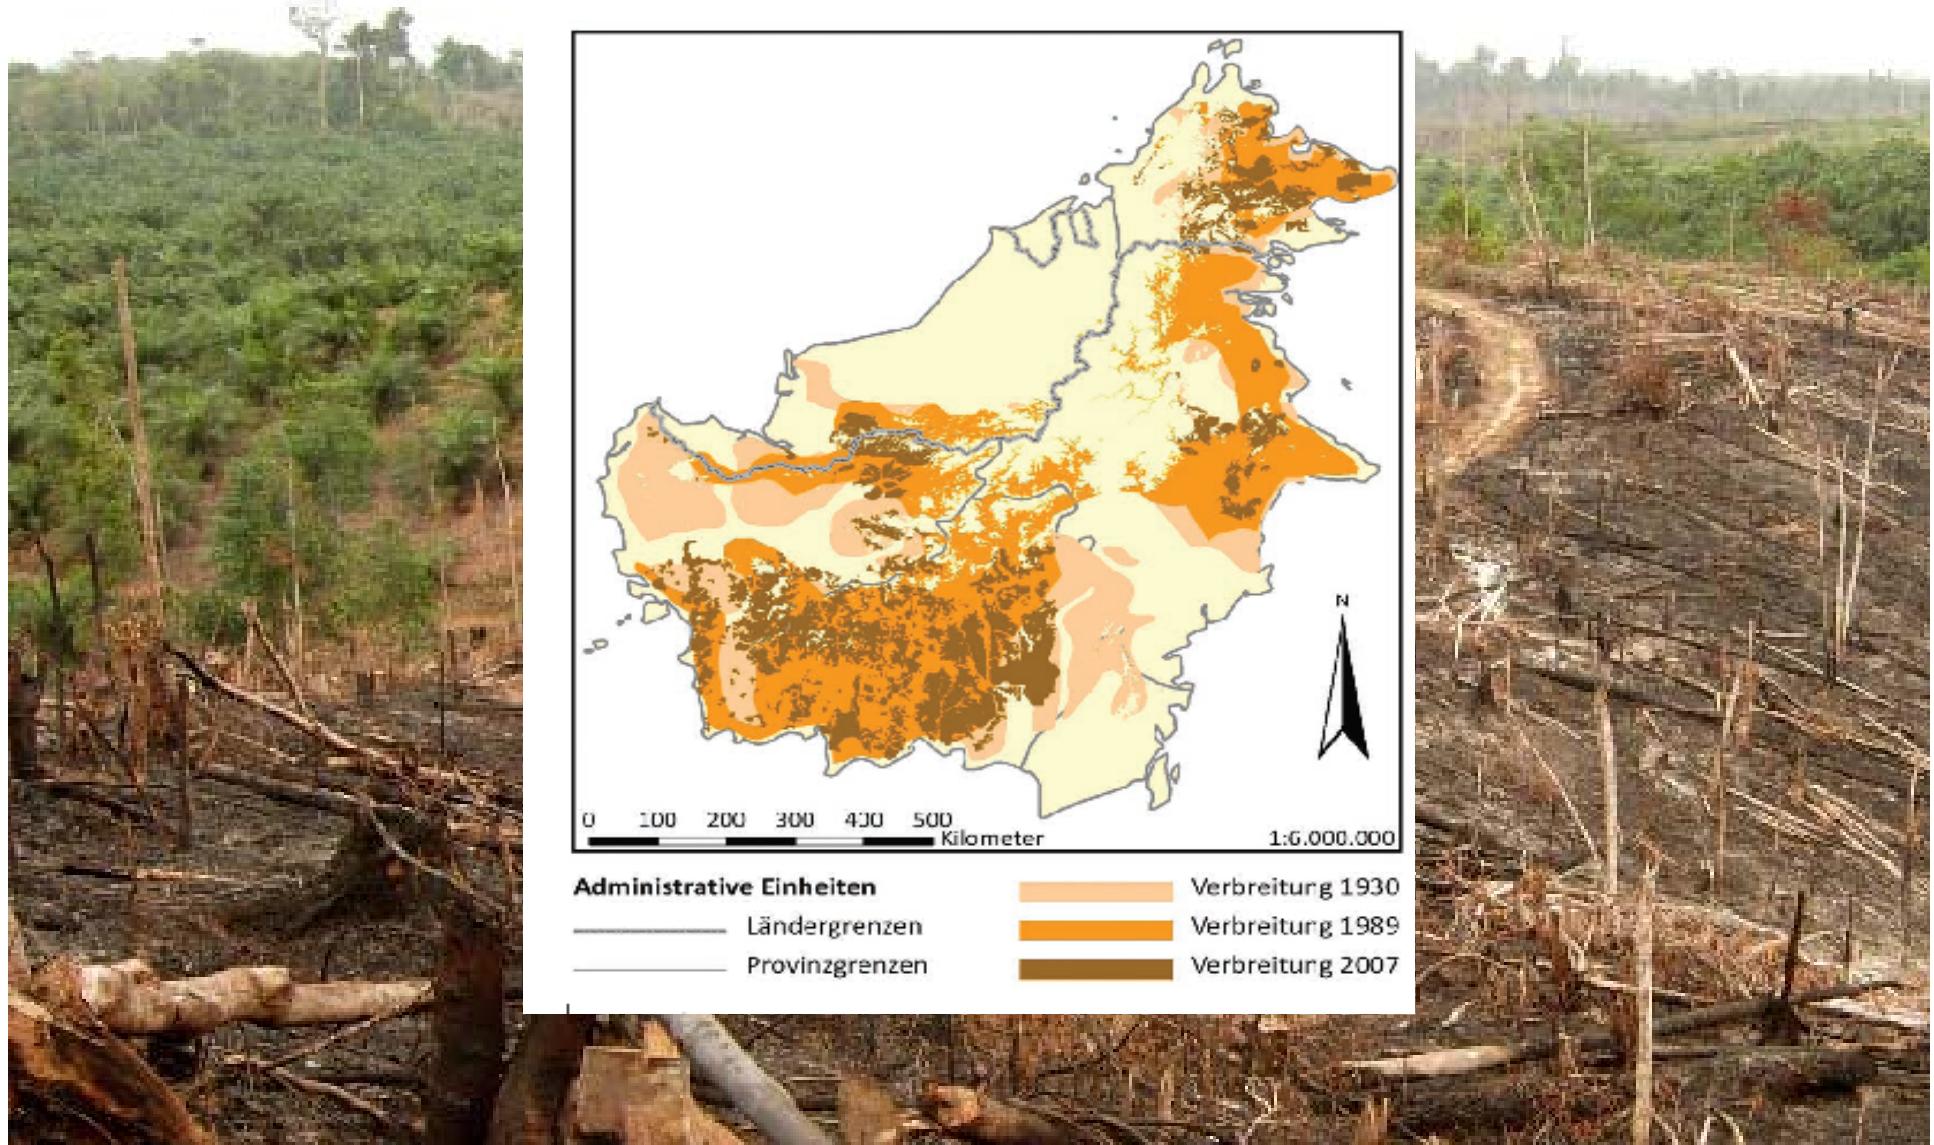

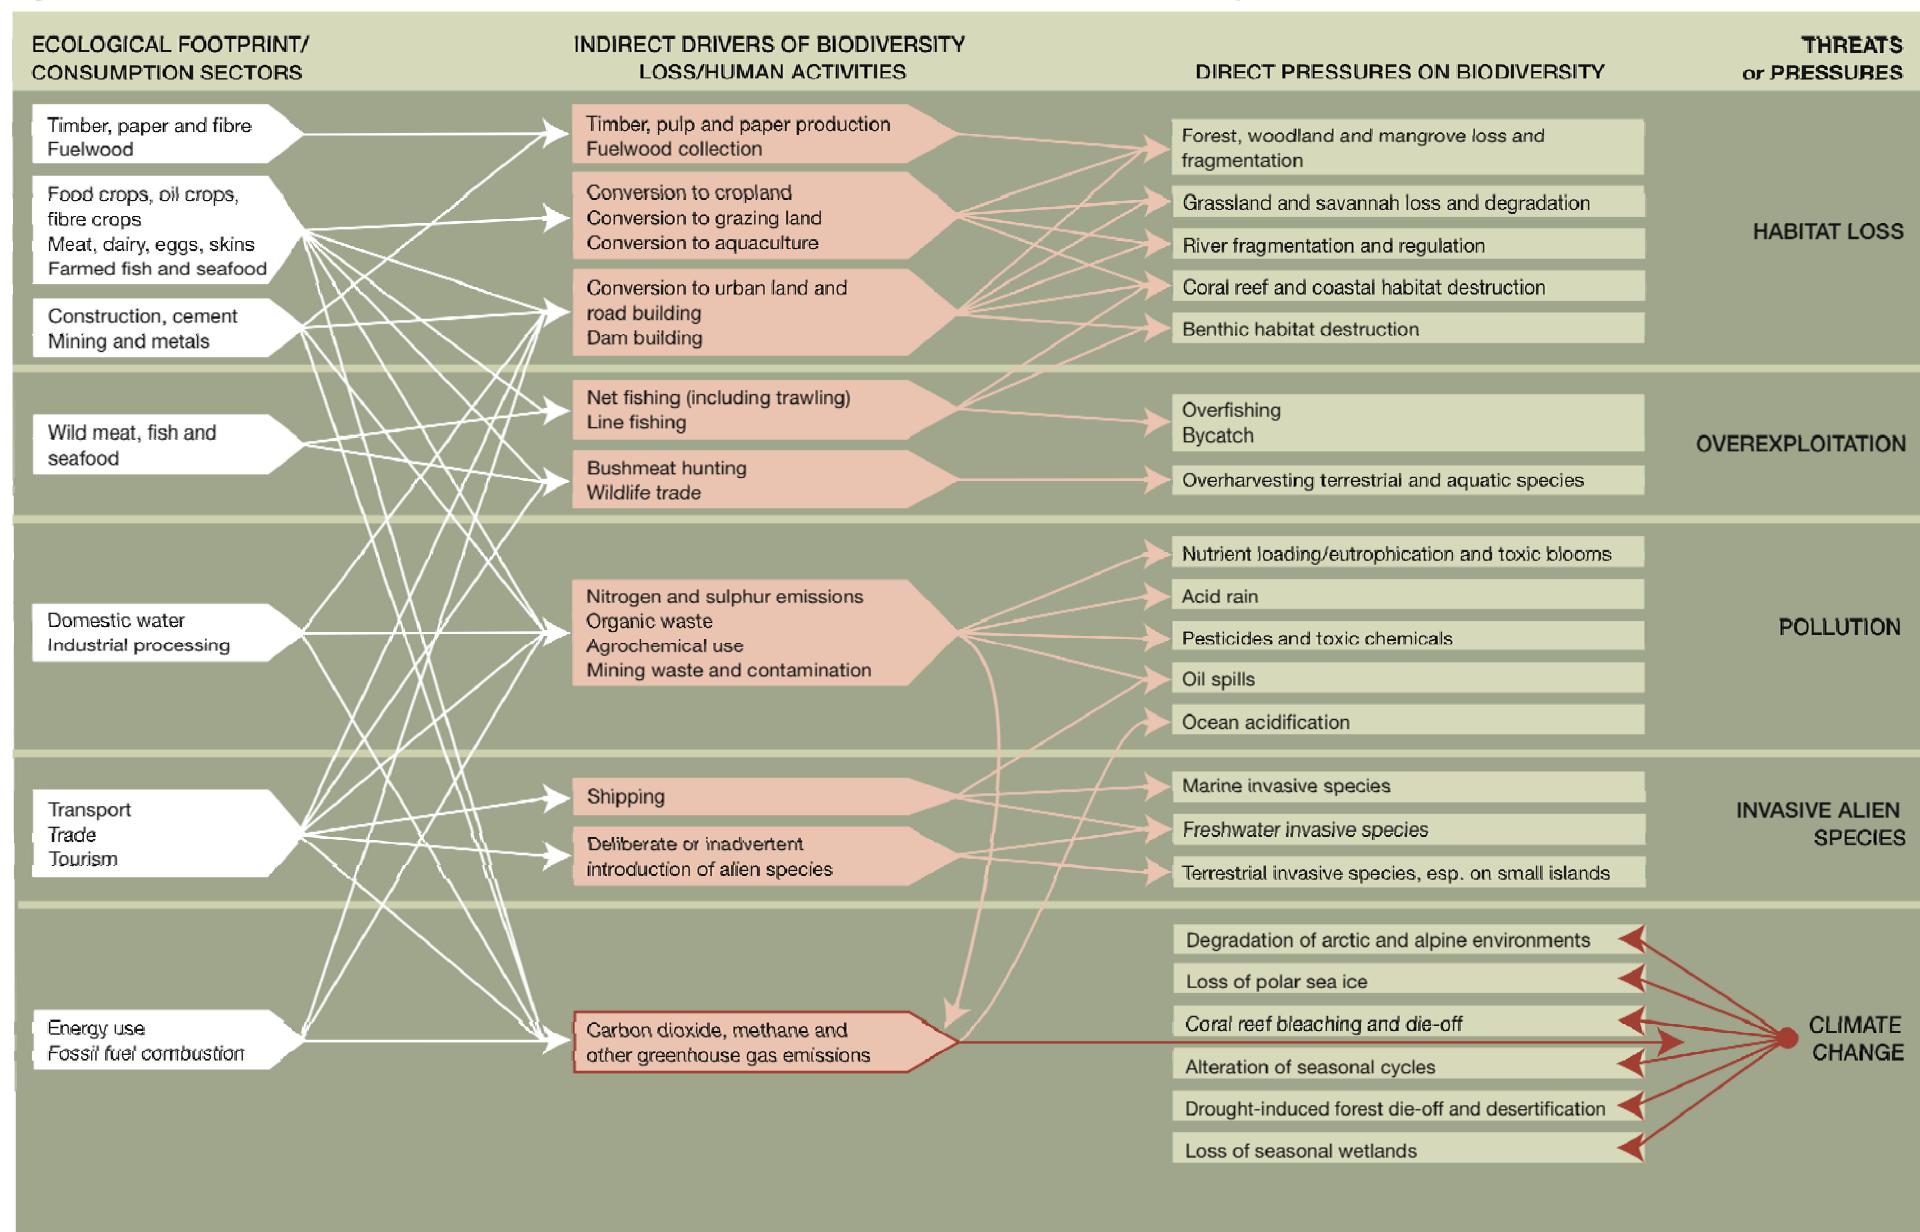

Fig. 4: BIODIVERSITY LOSS, HUMAN PRESSURE AND THE ECOLOGICAL FOOTPRINT, cause-and-effect relationships

Living Planet Index: global, temperate and tropical

Fig. 5: GLOBAL LIVING PLANET INDEX,
1970–2005

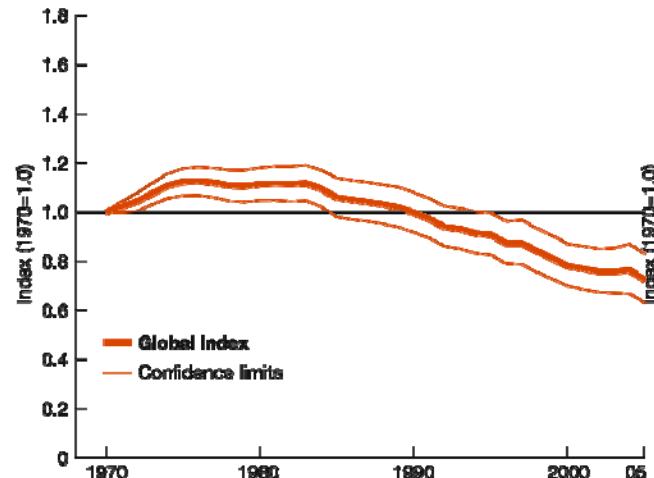

Fig. 6: TEMPERATE LIVING PLANET INDEX,
1970–2005

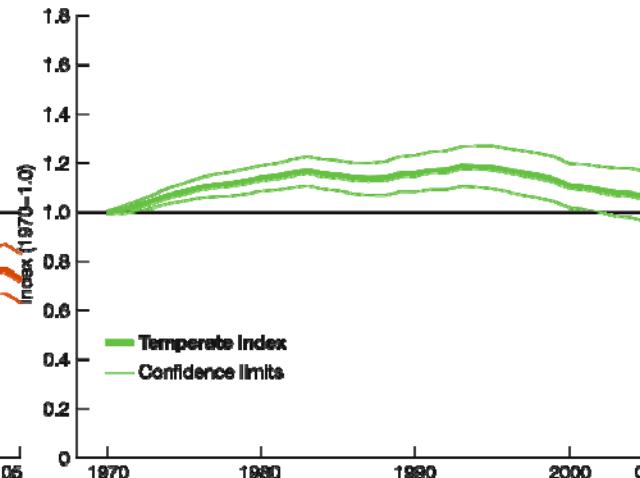

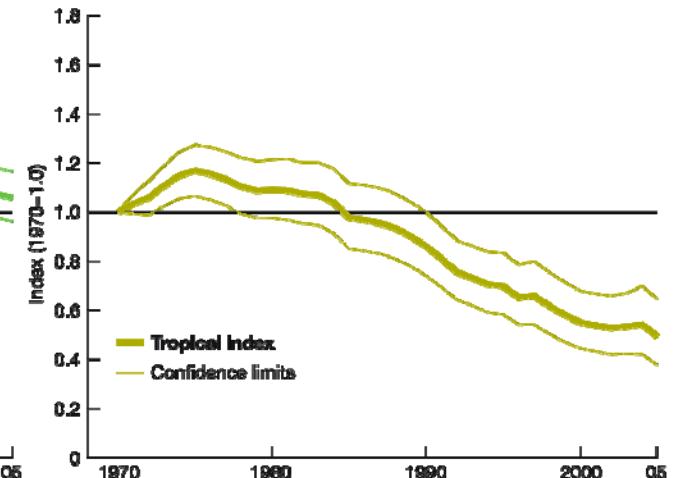

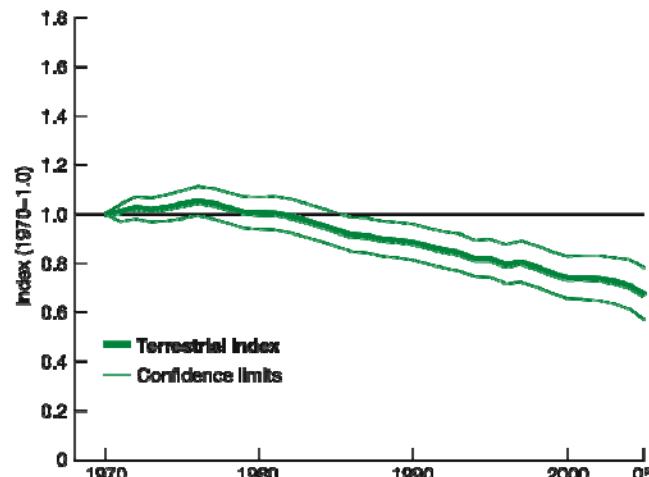

Fig. 7: TROPICAL LIVING PLANET INDEX,
1970–2005

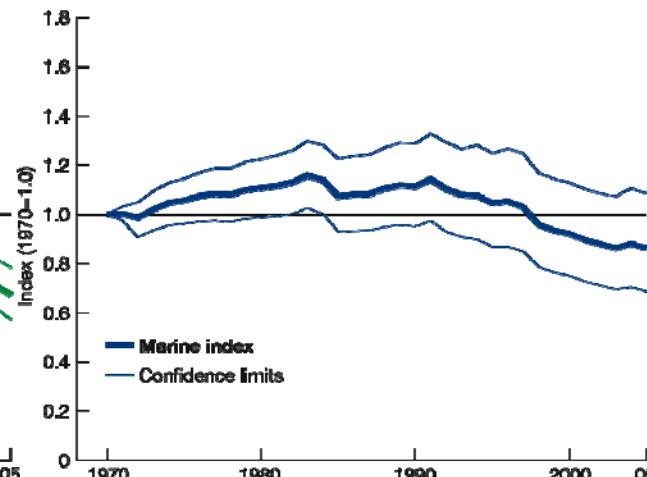

Living Planet Index: biomes

Fig. 9: TERRESTRIAL LIVING PLANET INDEX, 1970–2005

Fig. 10: MARINE LIVING PLANET INDEX, 1970–2005

Fig. 11: FRESHWATER LIVING PLANET INDEX, 1970–2005

World Ecological Footprint 1961 - 2005

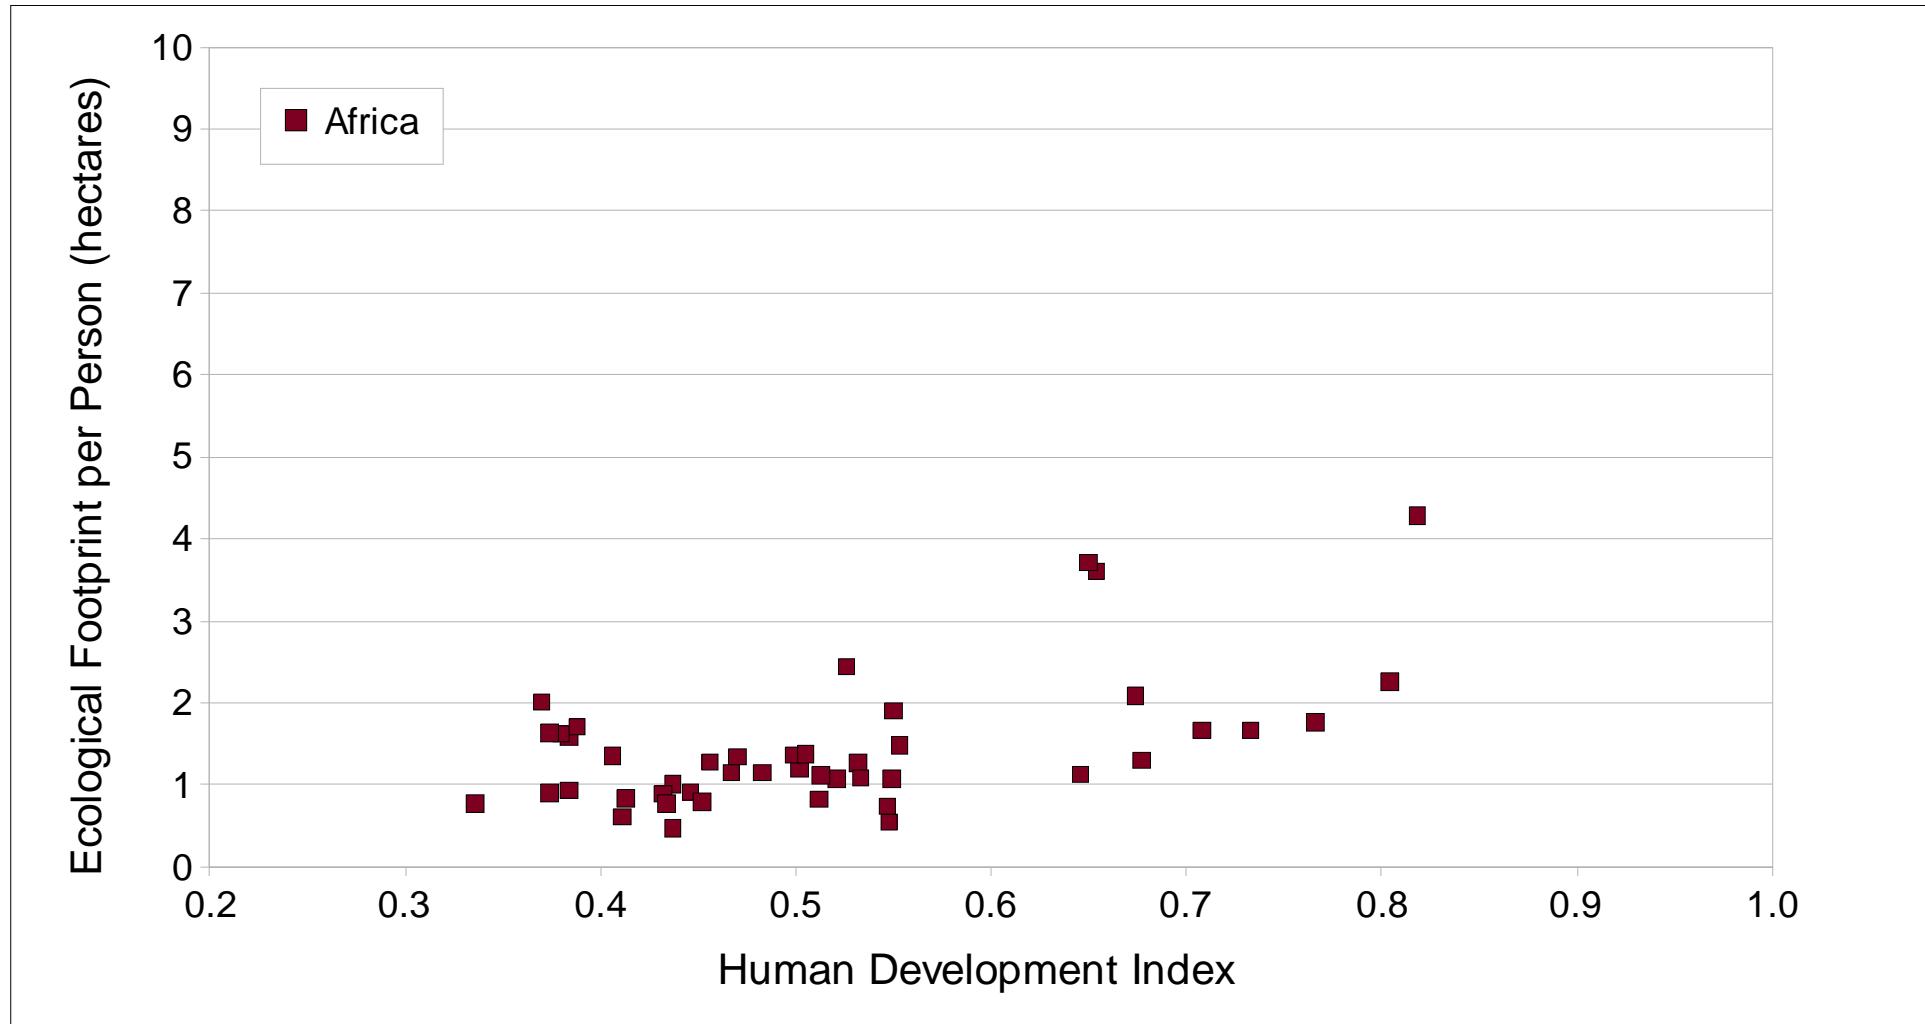

World Ecological Footprint 1961 - 2005

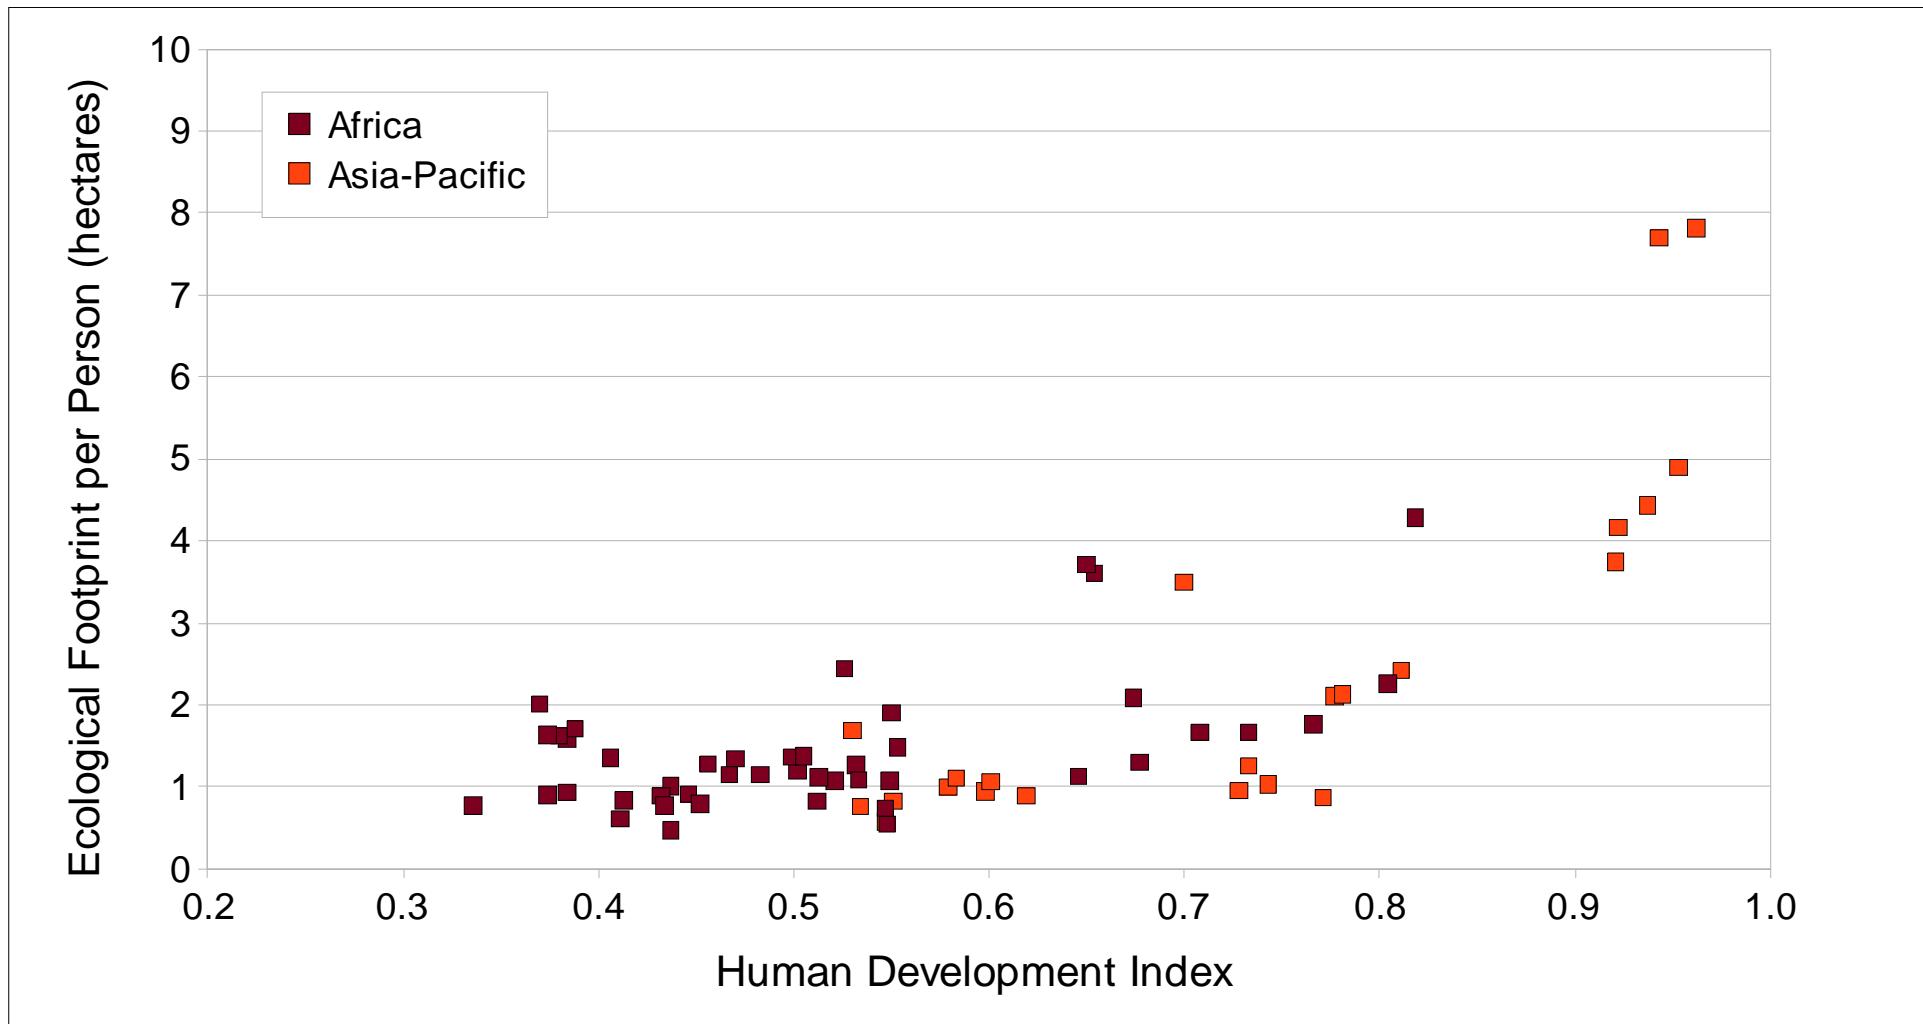

The World as perceived by the Earth

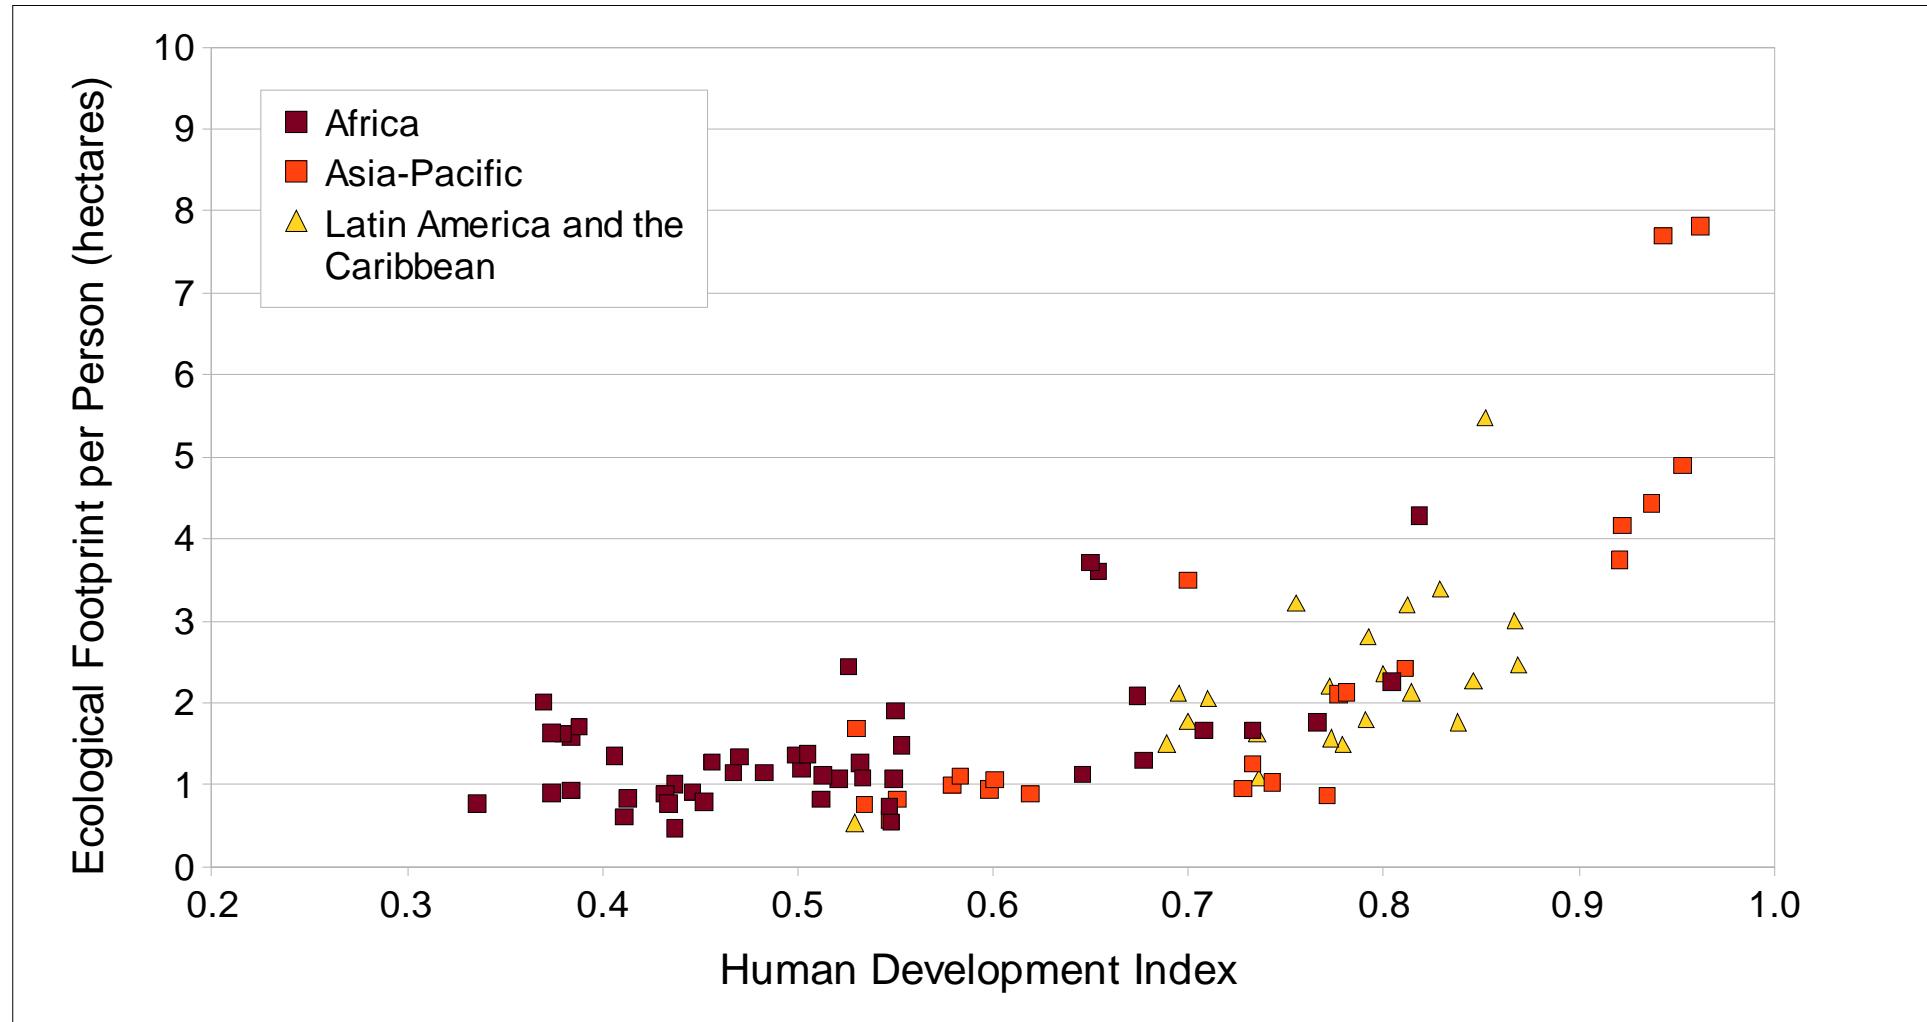

Human Development Index and the Ecological Footprint of Nations

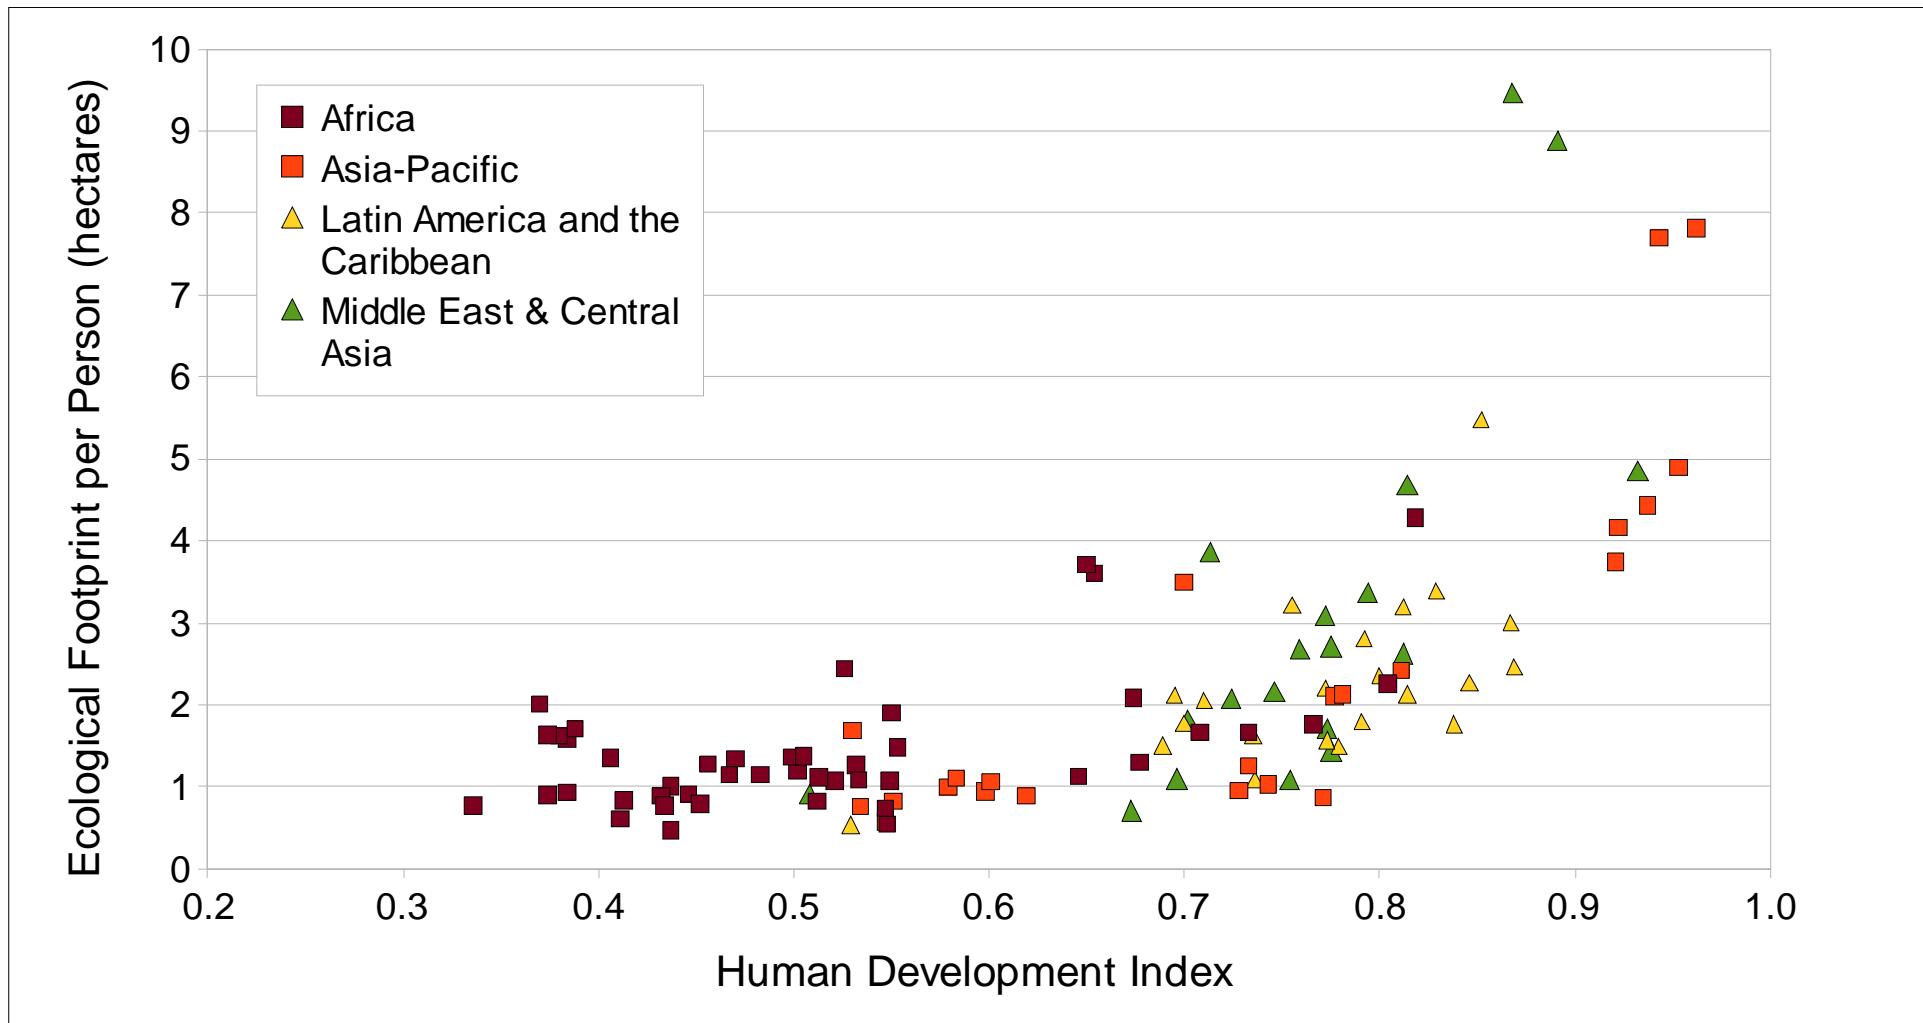

Human Development Index and the Ecological Footprint of Nations

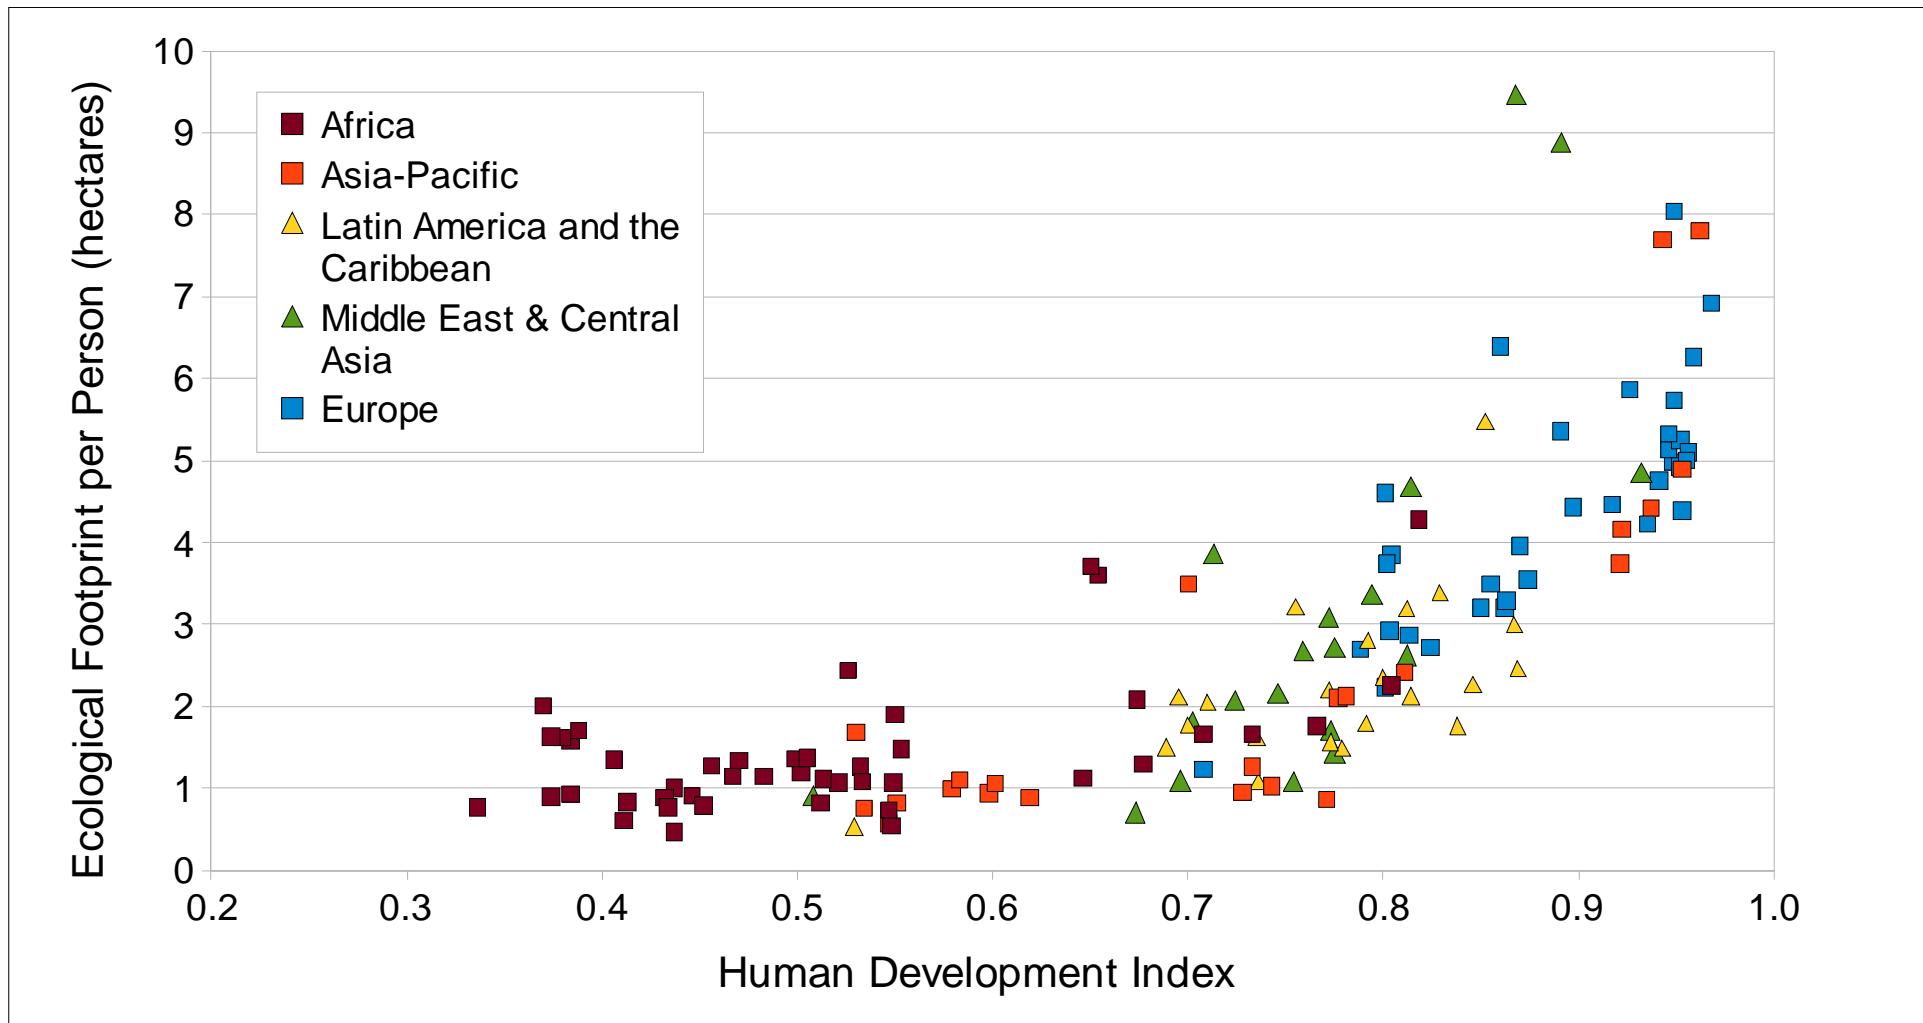

Human Development Index and the Ecological Footprint of Nations

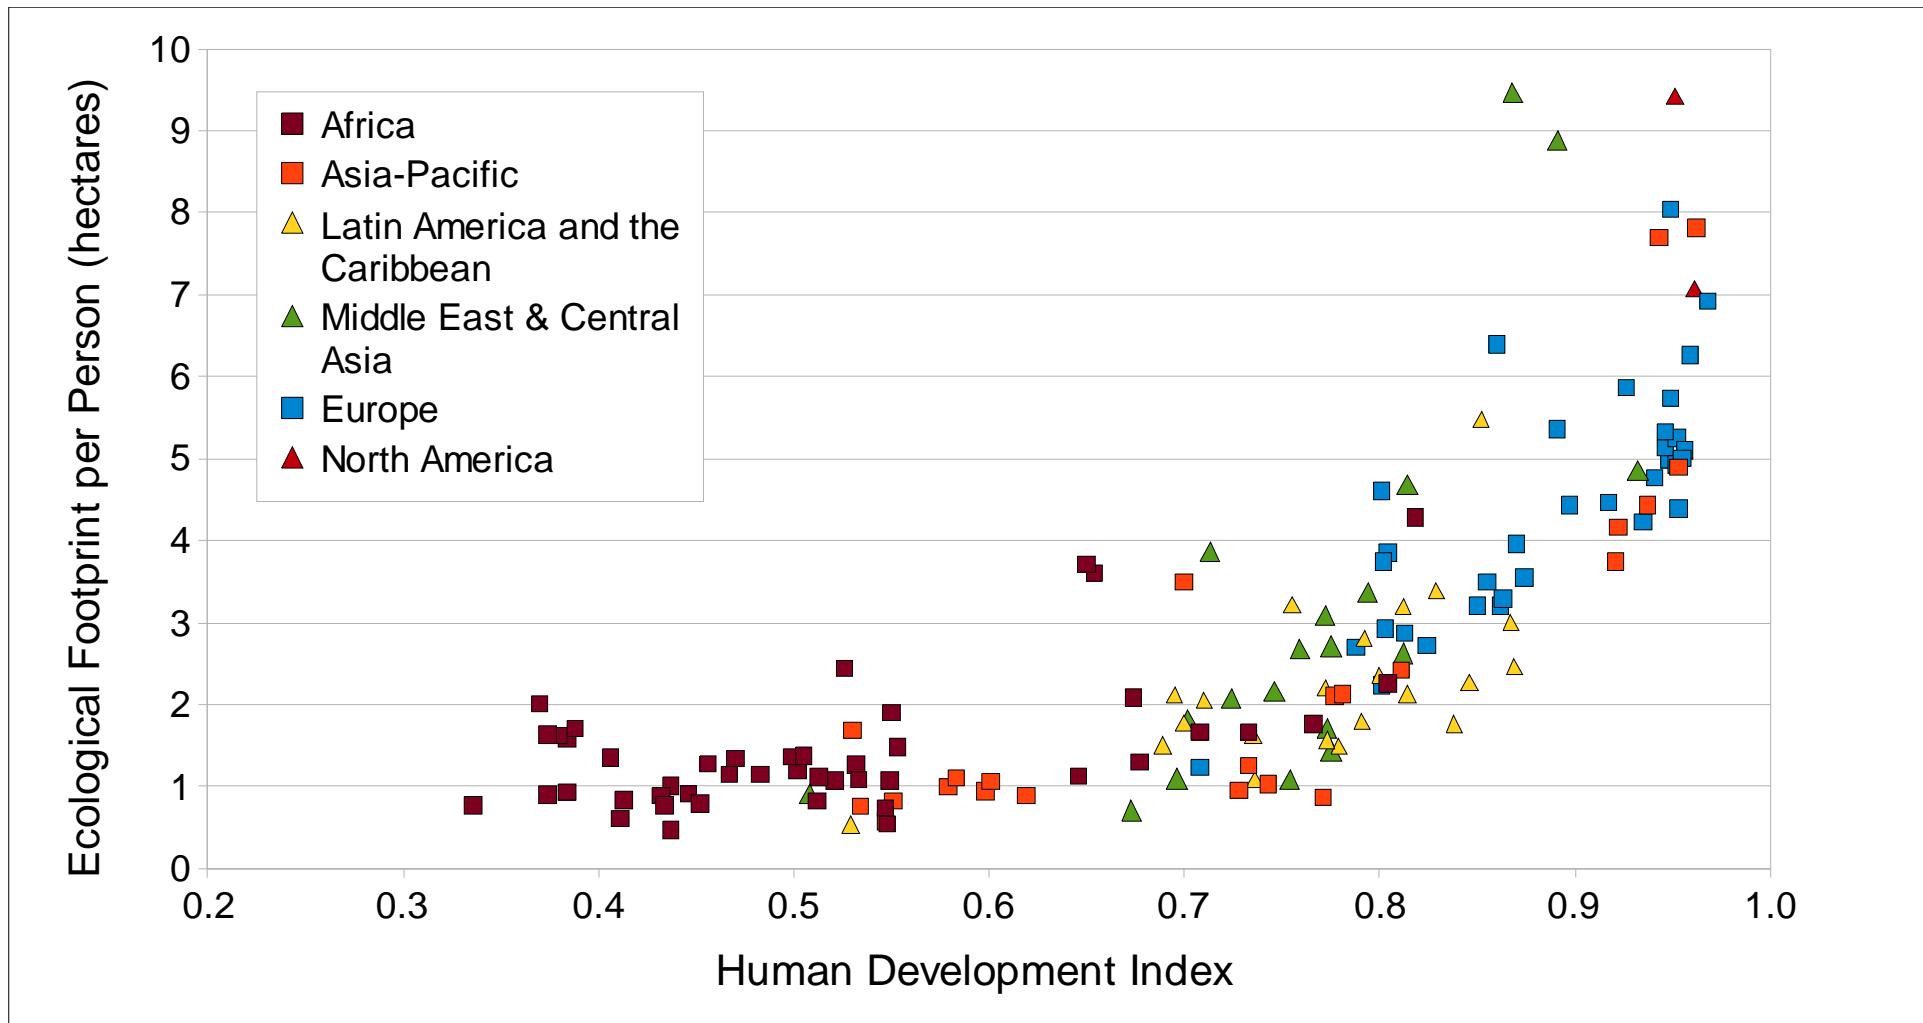

Human Development Index and the Ecological Footprint of Nations

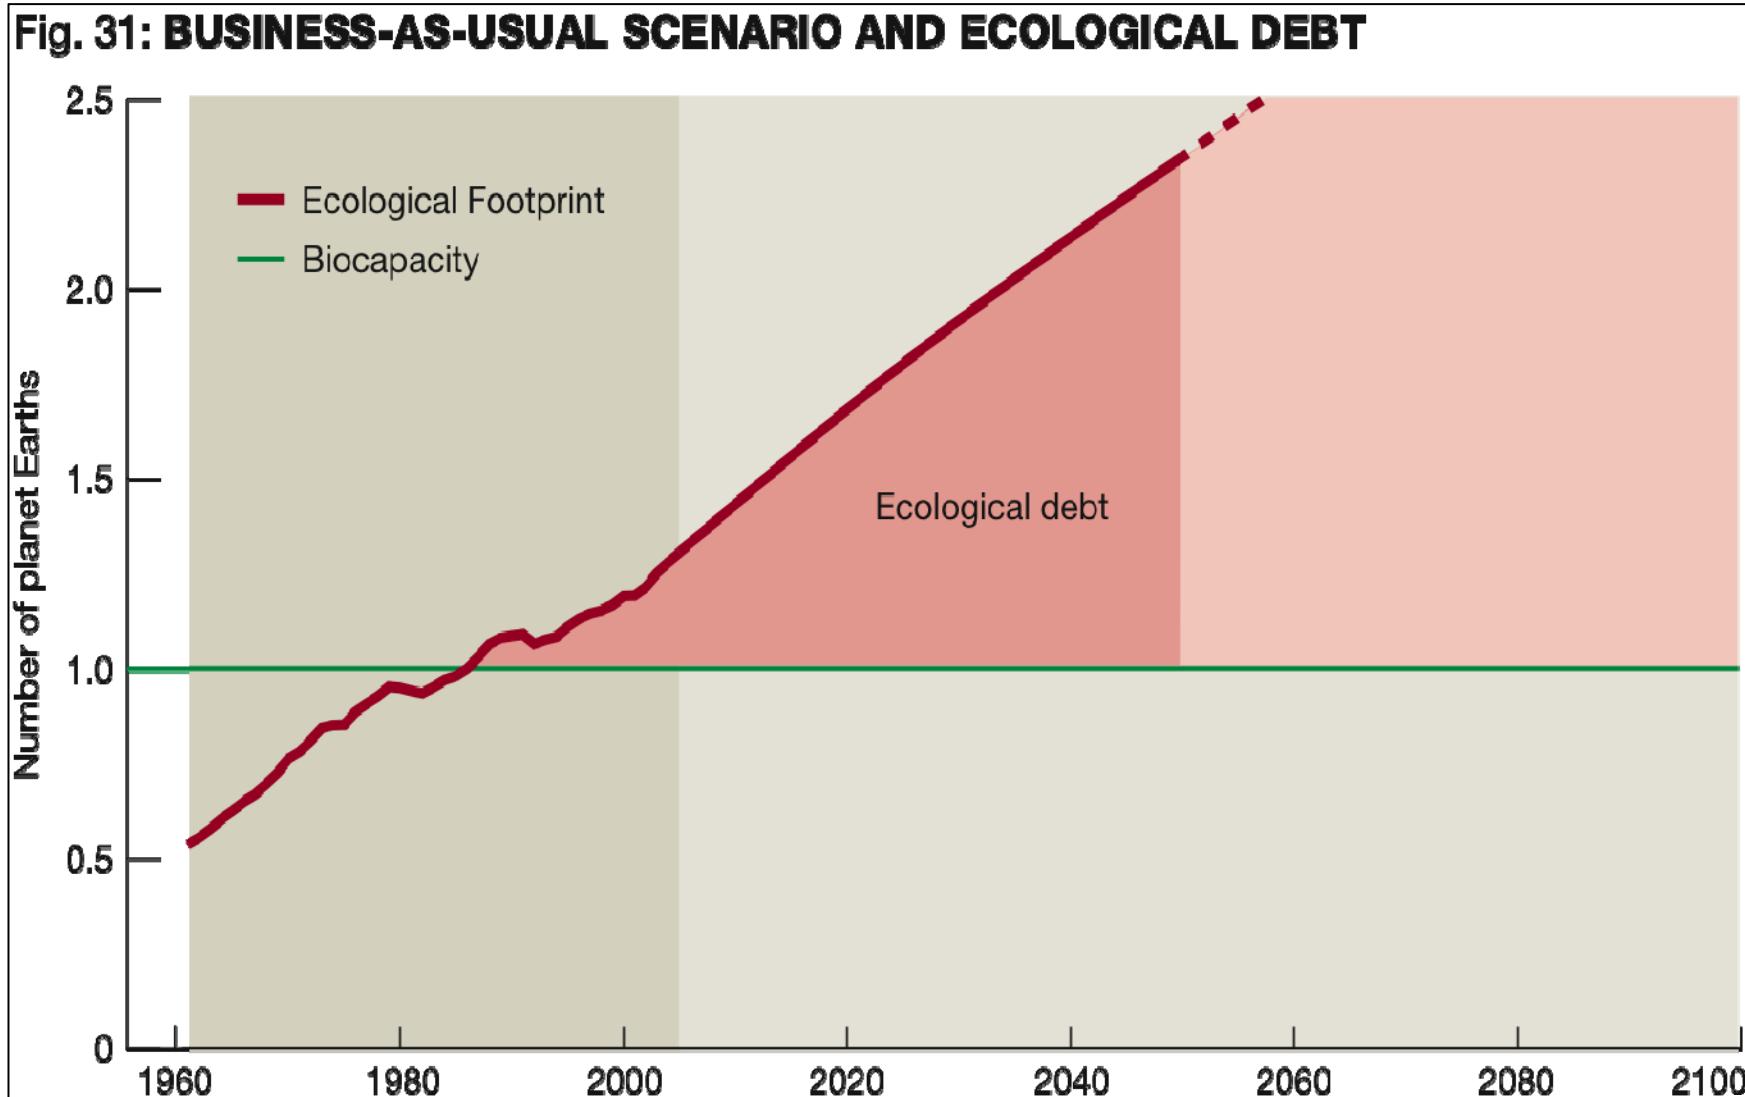

Human Development Index and the Ecological Footprint of Nations

Human Development Index and the Ecological Footprint of Nations

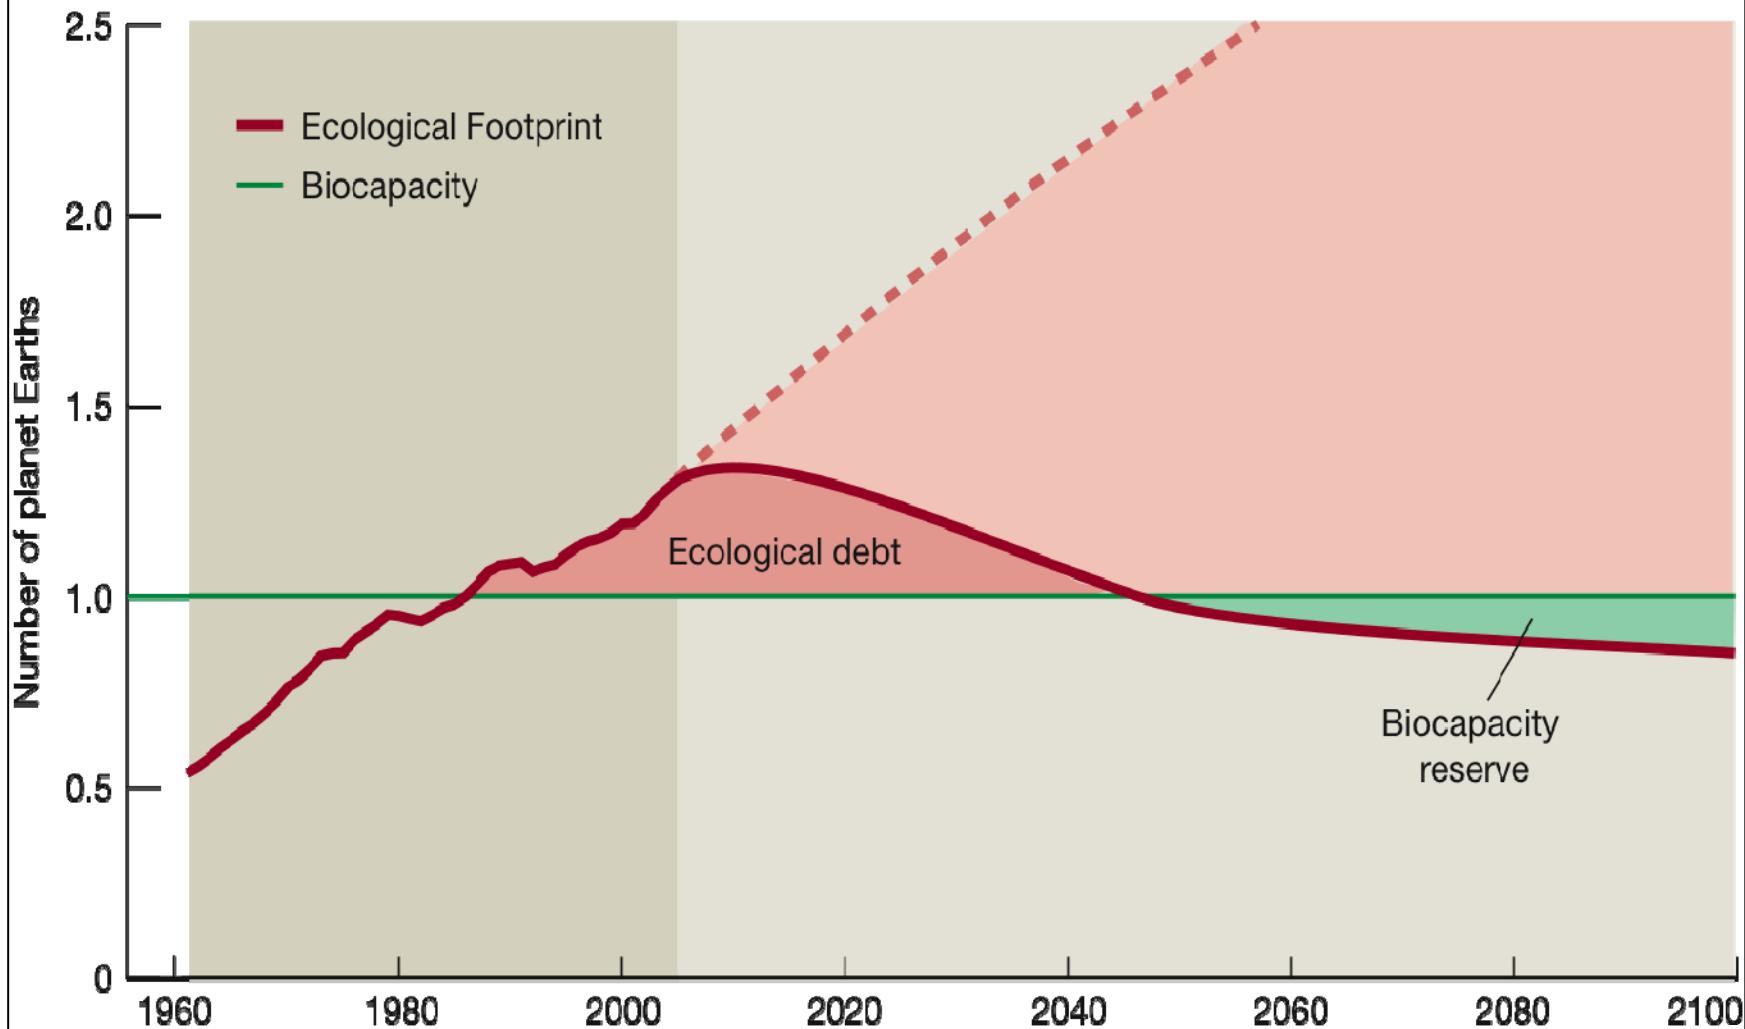

Turning the Tide: towards sustainability

Turning the Tide: towards sustainability

Fig. 32: RETURN TO SUSTAINABILITY

Turning the Tide: towards sustainability

